The Summa represents Thomas' mature thought on the graced movement of the elect towards God" conformed to, and moved by, their Trinitarian exemplar. Here, Thomas defines grace as a created habitus which is a deifying participation in the divine nature, and charity and wisdom as participations in the likeness of the Holy Spirit and Son.

The Grace of the Holy Spirit, the Virtue of Charity, and ...

Sufficient grace, as a weak delight, imparts merely the ability (posse), or such a feeble will that only the advent of the victorious delight of grace (delectatio coelestis vitrix, caritas) can guarantee the will and the actual deed. Therefore, like Thomism, the system postulates an essential difference between sufficient and efficacious grace.
